Realtors Hire Research Director

The Washington Board of Realtors has appointed Halvor Juul as director of research and statistics in its newly formed research department.

Thomas M. Walsh, president of the realtor group, said that Juul, until recently, was employed as an economist for the Central Intelligence Agency, and previously as a market analyst for Pure Oil Co. Juul is a graduate of Lake Forest College and Syracuse University.

Walsh said that the Board's research department will furnish statistical material needed by the real estate industry here. Some of the information is currently available but much time is wasted in finding it. It is the Board's plan to accumulate facts and figures and then publish them in periodic reports for use by members.

Much of Juul's time will be spent on both commercial and residential real estate.

Juul, who is married and has four children, resides in Bethesda.
